Unique Way Of Ventilating Mine Is Found

Local mine operators have hit upon a unique and economical method of ventilating mine workings, which no doubt will prove a boon to small mine operators who are faced with the problem of ventilation.

Messrs. Saunders and Glacoma, successful leasers in the Tombstone district were recently faced with the problem of mine ventilation at their lease on the Oregon group.

After a careful study of the situation, they hit upon a unique way of eliminating the bad air and gases at very little cost.

A hole was drilled in the top of a drift on the 145 foot level of their incline shaft to the surface.

The following method of doing the job was successfully used:

A Sullivan hand rotating machine was used, with a 3-inch four-point bit, welded onto a 3-foot section of 1 1/4 inch diamond drill, old style non-core tubing, and a shank to fit the machine was also welded onto a one-foot section of the same tubing. Three short lengths were used as starters, the permanent lengths being 5 ft. After drilling about 25 feet vertically above the drift, it became necessary to devise some means of holding the machine up against the ground, on account of the extra weight of the tubing above. A fork 5 inches long was shaped on the end of a 6-foot steel bar; the same being used as a lever, with the fork end placed under the barrel of the machine. One man held the machine against the ground by this means, while the other turned the tubing with a wrench fitted to the shank, and one way only on account of the thread connections.

This was accomplished by loosening the chuck-lashing in the head of the steeper. This also eliminated the winding and unwinding of the air hose around the machine. Although there was some hard rock encountered, this little Sullivan steeper pounded its way through in record time, drilling a three-inch hole 70 feet to the surface.

The average was about 12 feet per day. With the assistance of a 14 in. air jet this hole has succeeded in keeping the air pure in the mine workings.

This method was first used in the Cortland district by the Musso Bros. who drilled a 25 foot hole with hand augers (in soft ore) for the purpose of sampling same.

INCREASED EXPORTS THRU DOUGLAS PORT

DOUGLAS, Nov. 3.—A marked increase in imports through the port of Douglas is noted in the monthly report of E. M. Specht, in charge of this port during the absence of Collector George Notman. Following is the monthly report as prepared by Specht:

ORES OF TOMBSTONE MINING DISTRICT YIELD READILY TO PROPER RECOVERY METHODS

(By ARCHIE KELLY)

That the old camp of Tombstone is now on the return to a steady production of gold, silver and lead ores can no longer be doubted, even by the confirmed pessimist.

It is strange how often a false impression will dominate the truth to the detriment of a whole community. For now these many years, the false impression that the ores of the Tombstone district will not yield to any process now known, has been spread broadcast, and progress in the camp has been retarded and the community has suffered as a consequence.

The writer has contended for years that all that the famous old camp needs to make it second to none in the west as a producer of gold, silver and lead, is new blood, new energy, a foresight that can see beyond the skin and get side of mining, and the fact that every new work that has started in the camp in the last two years has met with immediate and continuous success seems to corroborate that contention.

The fallacious impression that the ores of this district baffle the most advanced metallurgists has been exploded so thoroughly that the only wonder of it is that it was ever believed. Even an ordinary miner that is familiar with the old arrastra and mule or burro for grinding ores, certainly knows better.

It is gratifying to state that, with the exception of the manganese ores of highly specific gravity, the ores of this district yield readily to the cyanide process, and to straight leaching to boot. So far, agitation has not been used in the tanks and yet entirely satisfactory results have been and are being obtained every day through straight leaching, and with the addition of agitation to the present system, will assure a recovery of the values to the highest of expectations.

There is more levelheaded and sincere activity in mining in the old camp at present than there has been for many years.

The present activity is based on demonstrated and satisfactory results that will benefit the community in general as fast as assured progress and success advance, which they are doing by leaps and bounds in the eyes of all who are familiar with mining.

Hayden Pleases Yuma Audience In Fine Speech

YUMA, Ariz., Nov. 3.—Carl Hayden for ten years the Arizona representative in Congress, made a telling speech at the Grand Opera house last evening. He struck some telling blows for democracy and incidentally poked the enemy in the ribs a good many times. He told how legislation is passed in Congress, threw a good deal of light upon the Colorado river development and the prospective development of Arizona.

He exposed the inequities of the Fordney-McCumber tariff bill and showed how the American people would be taxed $2,500,000 by this monstrous tariff legislation.

Mr. Hayden has developed into a very capable speaker and made one of the best speeches of the campaign.

HUNTERS SHOOT COWS FOR DEER. RANGERS CLAIM

PRESCOTT, Nov. 3.—Judging from the number of cattle killed, hunters in the Walnut Creek section are having some difficulty in distinguishing common cattle from deer and other game, according to H. Basil Wales, supervisor of the Prescott national forest.

This is causing much discontent among the farmers and cattlemen of this section.

E. H. Oldham, forest ranger from Walnut Creek, reported that he knew personally of five head which had been killed, and that he considered 20 head a conservative estimate of the numbers brought to his notice, said Mr. Wales.

FATHER OF ONE ALLEGED THIEF HELPS TRAIL HIM

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz., Nov. 3.—Great-est aid that Sheriff Campbell of this county and a sheriff from Colorado received in their recent sensational pursuit of Colorado horse thieves through northern and central Arizona was given by the father of one of the alleged thieves.

He is Jim Walker, of Montezuma county, Colorado. His 20-year-old son, Ralph Walker, was one of the five men accused of stealing 11 horses and mules in Colorado and Arizona. The elder Walker insists, however, that his son was an honorable young chap until he got mixed up with the bandits and was led into wrongdoing.

It was Walker senior who trailed the gang into this part of the country and when close upon them called upon the officers of this county and Navajo county to help. He accompanied the officers and their posse throughout the long chase. It so happened he was not with the party that finally caught Ralph Walker over in Apache county. Eventually four of the gang were caught, but the fifth, Charles Fowler, escaped.

"I expect him to take his medicine, and when he gets out we will take him back home. He will be older then, have more sense or responsibility and between his mother and me we will make a man of him yet."

HOW REPUBLICAN PROPAGANDISTS WOULD MAKE I. W. W. "ISSUE" IS DEMONSTRATED AT PHOENIX

Just how the republican organization of Phoenix tried to manufacture an issue, is shown in the following affidavit of an ex-service man received here today from the State Democratic Central Committee. It follows:

State of Arizona, County of Maricopa, ss.

E. D. McMullen, of lawful age, being first duly sworn on oath, deposes and says:

That he is a resident of Phoenix, Maricopa county, Arizona, and has been such a resident for a period of forty-six years, being born in Maricopa county, Arizona; that he is a disabled veteran of the world war, and a member of the Disabled Veterans' organization of Phoenix, Arizona; that on Saturday, October 29, 1922, while sitting near the Southern Pacific Depot, in Phoenix, at about three o'clock P. M., he was approached by a man, whom he did not know, and with whom he is not now acquainted; that this man called him aside and asked "what he was doing" to which he replied nothing; that the man then asked him "if he desired to make some easy money" and to which he replied he did not know, that sometimes this easy money isn't what it looks like. The man then said that "he wanted to get about twenty men to pose as member of the I. W. W. organization; that he had buttons and cards and that he would pay $200.00 each; that he wanted these men to be arrested by a United States marshal; that their pictures would be taken and that they would not be confined in jail for more than five or six days"; that he laughed at the proposal of this man and told him that he would not pose as an I. W. W. under any circumstances or conditions, and that ended the conversation; that he voluntarily came into the Democratic State Headquarters in Phoenix, Arizona, and reported the matter to Mr. Vernon L. Vaughn, the Chairman, and that this affidavit is made voluntarily and without any promise of remuneration whatever.

Further affiant saith not.

Much Interest In City Election Next Tuesday

Despite the interest in the general state and county election to be held Tuesday, Tombstone is expected to cast a heavy vote in the city election which takes place in Tombstone on the same day, and candidates for every office will appear on the ballot, a number of contests being evident.

If the heavy vote cast in the primaries held on the 5th of last month is any indication of interest, it is expected that practically a hundred per cent vote will be cast, since the vote will be generally gotten out for the general election besides the fact that there are to be two contested offices, those of mayor and chief of police.

For mayor, J. A. Ivey appears in the Democratic column, opposing C. J. Cummings, who is running for re-election on the Republican ticket, and backers for both sides are claiming victory, although but little campaigning has been done by either side.

For chief of police Porter McDonald in the Democratic column will be opposed by Montague L. Reed, who filed his petition for a place in the independent column shortly after McDonald was nominated in the primaries. Both candidates have been working and this office will probably be one of the most spirited contests of the city election.

For councilman, R. J. Cornelius, Democrat, is unopposed in the first ward, while in the second ward J. L. Sparks, Republican, who was nominated at the primaries, has declined to allow his name to appear on the ballot due to the fact that he is contemplating leaving Tombstone on the first of the year and in his stead the name of Walter McLaren is to be written in from that ward by the Republicans. It has been stated, while the name of J. H. Nixia has also been suggested, as well as that of Dave Struthers in the Democratic column. In the third ward R. B. Krow, appears in the Democratic column and R. C. Marshall on the Republican side, while in the fourth ward R. V. Saunders, Democrat, is unopposed.
